

VALOREM

WORTH, MEASURED.

Brand book · Version 1.0 · 30 August 2026

THE ASSAY MARK

The mark is a V that is also a balance. Two arms meet at a vertex. A beam crosses the opening. A diamond sits on the point: the punch. The double ring is a hallmark. Twelve ticks stand for a full assay, not a clock.

Clearspace

Keep a quiet field around the mark equal to the height of the V. Do not lock the seal to a photograph without a vellum or ink plate. Do not outline, bevel, drop-shadow, or recolor the diamond independently of the arms.

VALOREM IS SET IN CINZEL

Cinzel is an inscriptional face. It is the only face permitted for the wordmark. Tracking is open. Never set Valorem in title case inside the lockup. Never italicize it. The tagline sits in IBM Plex Mono, small caps by setting the phrase in uppercase.

THE NUMBER IS THE PRODUCT

Valorem writes like an assay certificate. Short sentences. Named sources. No motivational verbs. Latin is permitted when it is the word itself: ad valorem. Do not decorate a valuation with a slogan that the number does not support.

DO

- Set the wordmark in Cinzel only.
- Use assay as a hairline, never a field.
- Keep 7:1 contrast on body text.
- Place the seal on vellum or ink.
- Name the asset before praising it.

DO NOT

- Do not set VALOREM in sans.
- Do not use rainbow gradients.
- Do not drop-shadow the mark.
- Do not lock the seal to stock photos.
- Do not write unlock, empower, reimagine.

Ad valorem. According to worth. Not according to mood.

LETTERHEAD AND CARD

Letterhead is vellum with a verdigris spine and an assay hairline at the head. The mark sits top right. The card is ink, with the seal in vellum and the name in Cinzel. Separate production files live in print/.
